the work of the school, and should keep close watch of all the scholars. He should be prompt and methodical in his habits. He should keep his records in a businesslike manner, so that upon his death his successor may take up the work where he leaves off. But, above all, the secretary must remember that he is a subordinate. He may have first rate ideas and may originate admirable reforms, but he must not attempt to put them into effect. That is the province of the superintendent, and they must be inaugurated by him if at all.

It was particularly apropriate that the address on "School Offerings" this morning should be presented by the superintendent of that school, Mr. L. D. Alden. He said that one of the test results of giving is in its effect upon the heart of the giving is in the motive is not a good one the offering fails of its best results. He favored steady and consistent giving. It is better to give a small sum regularly than large sums at infrequent intervals. Children should be given the opportunity as far as possible of earning what they give. A small giving average foots up a large total by the end the year. But one must not expect children to give generously if the adult members of the church and the teachers of the Sundiay school are grudging givers. In our circulant Mr. Alden precented a number of important suggestions for the advancement of the work.

corcluded his paper with a few valuable suggestions to those who contemplate orgarizing home departments. To systematize the work and increase the clement of personal influence, the home department is divided into classes. A class may be formed of ore or more persons, reporting to the school through one wish of direct grades may be termined by the class may be termined to get the class may be the most officer of the same trady; but because they are under the care of one permanent visitor, they form a class. The ni mber in a class must be determined by the ability of the visitor to give all the time required for faithful visitation and oversight. Few visitors can profitably take the care of more than twelve. Members whose homes are so distant that they cannot be reached by personence classes and be found of the care of persons who will regularly communicate with them by mail.

Home Classes.

The first step in the work of the home de-partment is to organize home classes. This should be done by a canvass by which every

What Becomes of Old Steamships.

What Becomes of Old Steamships. From the New York Tribune.

A paragraph in this column a few days ago showed that some of the old steamships, sold from time to time, were employed in various ways. "What becomes of the old American warships," a correspondent asks. Some of them are "present or accounted for" by a recent official publication in Washington.

It says that the schooner Active is now the merchant schooner Addle Thatcher; the schooner Alena is the merchant schooner Australia; the steam sloop Penguin is the merchant schooner Floids; the steam sloop Grace Grummond; the schooner Falcon is the merchant schooner Floids, the schooner Aleataz is the merchant schooner Kaich and the steam sloop Quinnebaug is the salling merchant schooner Lot, and the steam sloop Quinnebaug is the salling merchant schooner of the same name.

Horses as Tramps.

A gentleman who had occasion to drive from Coldwater to Hudson, Mich., the other day, noticed no less than twenty horses roving along the highways. Two or norses roving along the nignways. Two or three of the equines had tags lied around their necks, which read, "Take me, and I am yours." The gentleman said farmers could not realize more than $5 apiece for their common work horses, and as it would cost $20 to winter them over, they had al-lowed the animals to become wanderers.

When you say that you don't know it, or try to fool her and say you did have it, but lost the memorandum, she will answer back. Whe cannot give you know the number."

The fact of it is the girl would be breaking strict rules of the company if she gave this information. There are a good many millionaires and prominent society families who have telephones in their residences, but they are for private use. Only the friends of the head of the house and a few other persons know the number. The mistress of the mansion leaves the number with her friends, and in occha her number with her friends, and in occha her number their numbers of the mansion leaves the number with her friends, and in occha her number with her friends, and in occha her number happens to be on the managing committee. This exclusive system is adopted in order that outsiders cannot annoy Mr. Millonaire by ringing him up on the telephone. The men who have telephones put into their places do so with the proviso that their names and telephone numbers shall not appear in the directory.
